

One Idea. A Week of Content. Claude.

Turn one insight into a full week of posts.

This is how Ejoshi makes content every week without burning out.

Ejoshi

You Have Good Ideas. You Just Don't Post Them.

Every creator knows this feeling: you sit down to write a post, you have nothing. Or you have something — one good insight from something that happened this week — and you use it once, for one post, and then it's gone.

The real problem isn't a lack of ideas. It's not knowing how to stretch one idea across multiple formats. A great thought that could have been a social post, a newsletter, a poll, and a conversation starter gets used once — then you run out of content again next Monday.

Claude can fix this. Give it one idea — a lesson you learned, a mistake you made, a thing you noticed about your industry — and it'll spin it into a full week of content across formats. Not generic. Not templated. Actually useful.

This is the exact process Ejoshi uses every week. One idea in. A week of content out. Here's the prompt.

The One-Idea Content Engine

Paste this into Claude. Replace the bracket with your idea.

I have one idea I want to share: [paste your core idea, insight, or lesson in 2-3 sentences].

Please help me turn it into:

1. A short social post (3-4 sentences, plain language, no hashtags)
2. A longer LinkedIn/Facebook post with a bit more context
3. A one-question poll I could ask my audience
4. A subject line for a newsletter about this idea

HOW TO USE IT

- > Your idea: doesn't need to be polished. 2-3 rough sentences is all Claude needs.
- > Read all four outputs before deciding what to post. Sometimes the poll becomes the best piece.
- > Edit after: Claude gives you the structure. You put your voice in it.

Ejoshi's Actual Idea

THE IDEA PASTED INTO CLAUDE:

Most people use AI like a search engine. They ask a question and take the first answer. But AI is actually a thinking partner. The real power comes from the conversation.

CLAUDE'S FOUR OUTPUTS:

1. Short Social Post

Most people treat AI like Google. Ask a question, grab the answer, done. But that's not how it works best. The real value is in the back-and-forth. Try having a conversation with it instead.

2. LinkedIn / Facebook Post

There's a pattern I keep seeing. Someone tries AI a few times, gets decent answers, and concludes it's 'pretty good but not mind-blowing.' Here's what they're missing: AI isn't a better search engine. It's a thinking partner. The quality of what you get depends almost entirely on the quality of the conversation you bring to it.

3. Poll

How do you mostly use AI right now? A) Like a search engine (ask + answer) B) Like a thinking partner (back-and-forth conversation)

4. Newsletter Subject Line

"You're using AI like Google. Here's the better way."

YOUR TURN

One Idea This Week

1. Think of one thing that happened in your business this week — a lesson, a mistake, a question a customer asked, something that made you think.
2. Write it out in 2-3 sentences. Don't overthink it.
3. Open Claude at claude.ai. Paste the prompt from page 3. Drop in your idea.
4. Read all four outputs. Pick the one that feels most right. Edit it in your own voice. Post it.
